PENNYPACKER'S SPEECH

President Introduced by the Governor-Drive Over the Historic Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., May 30 .- On historic Cemetery Hill, overlooking ground hallowed by the blood of half a hundred thousand brave men, and in the presence of a concourse of thousands who had assembled to pay tribute to the memory of the Nation's dead, Preseident Roosevelt to-day delivered

On nearly the same spot, on Nov. 19, 1863, President Lincoln delivered the immortal address enunciating principles which have rung around the world for more than a third of a century

President Roosevelt was escorted to the cemetery on the battlefield by a body of several hundred veterans of the civil war. The President and his special escort were preceded by several organizations, including a squadron of United States cavalry, the Third United States artillery and the Marine Band of Washington, which had been ordered here for the occasion. Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the President's party followed in carriages. The rear of the procession consisted of civil organizations and citizens in carriages.

Governor Pennypacker presided at the ceremonies, which were held in the rostrum In the cemetery. After the memorial servand the pupils of the public schools had strewn flowers over the graves of the dead, during which ceremony the Marine Band States Senate, pronounced the invocation. The President was then introduced by Governor Pennypacker, who made a brief speech. The Governor said: The battle of Gettysburg, momentous in its exhibition of military force and skill, tremendous in its destruction of human life, the race are limitless. As the seeds of the cockle are sown with the wheat, so in the Constitution adopted by the fathers in 1787 lay the germs of an inevitable struggle: Two antagonistic forces grew in vigor and strength, sloe by side, in one household, and, like Ormused and Ahrimau, they must struggle came to a determination and the issue between them was here decided with

"The rebellion was undertaken by the followers of the doctrines of Calheun and Davis with the purpose to rend the Nation asunder and break it into fragments. Alas for the futility of the expectations of men! The Lord, who holds the peoples in the hollow of His hand, and who since the dawn of history has taken them up by turns in the search for one fit for broad dominion, did not forsake us. The extraordinary powers exercised for the maintenance of the national life in that dire time of war became fixed as the principles of the national government. The fiame of strife but tested the virtue of the metal. The blows intended to dissever only welded the sovereignty together more firmly for future wider effort. The Nation, as it exists to-day, arose when Picket falled to drive the Philadelphia brigade from the stone wall on Cemetery Hill. * * The presidential office is so great a station among men that those who fill it are not to be regarded as personali-Their individuality is lost in its immensity. They become the manifestations ment of the natonal life. Jackson repre-sented its rough, uncouth and undisciplined strength. Lincoln looms up above all other Americans, bearing the burden of woe and suffering which fate laid upon his broad shoulders in its time of stress and trial. Blessed be his memory forever!

"No people can look forward to the fulfillment of such destiny as events seem to outline for us, save one alert and eager with the cathusiasm and vigor of youth. No other President has so stood for that which, after all, typifies our life-the sweep of the winds over broad prairies, the snow-capped mountains and the rushing rivers, the sequoia trees, the exuberance of youth, conscious of red blood, energy and power, painting our bow of promise as does Theodore Roosevelt. He has hunted in our woods; he has enriched our literature; he has ridden in the face of the enemy; he has maintained our ideals.

"Upon this day, devoted to the of the heroic dead-in Pennsylvania a sad Decoration day-the achievements of the rolline past and the promise of the teeming future confront each other. To-day, for the first time. Theodore Roosevelt treads the field made immortal by the sword of George Gordon Meade and hallowed by the prose dirge of Abraham

NOTABLE ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT

As President Roosevelt rose to speak a downpour of rain began and continued throughout the time he addressed the great assemblage. He was accorded an enthusiastic reception, notwithstanding the rain. and the crowd of 10,000 people in the cemetery remained to hear the address, despite the thorough drenching it received.

Referring in the beginning of his speech to the allusion of Governor Pennypacker to the death of Senator Quay, the President

"Governor Pennypacker alluded to the fact that to-day Pennsylvania mourns its senior senator. The regiment which Senator Quay was instrumental in raising took part in this battle of Gettysburg-the battle in which Governor Pennypacker shared. Senator Quay was not with it. He had gone with another regiment, and it is appropriate at this time to recall the fact that, when the term of service of that regiment expired, just before Fredericksburg. Senator Quay declined to accept the discharge, and continued as a volunteer with the army that fought at Fredericksburg and won the medal of honor on that

"The place where we now are has won a double distinction. Here was fought one of the great bettles of all time, and here was spoken one of the few speeches which shall last through the ages. As long as this Republic endures or its history is known, so long shall the memory of the battle of Gettysburg likewise endure and be known; and as long as the English tongue is understood, so long shall Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg speech thrill the hearts of mankind. "The civil war was a great war for rightcousness; a war waged for the noblest ideals, but waged also in thoroughgoing, practical fashion. It was one of the few come, a lift toward better things for the nations of mankind. Some wars have meant the triumph of order over anarchy and licentiousness masquerading as liberty; some wars have meant the triumph of liberty over tyranny masquerading as order; but this victorious war of ours meant the triumph of both liberty and order, the triumph of orderly liberty, the bestowal of civil rights upon the freed slaves, and at the same time the stern insistence on the supremacy of the national law throughout the ength and breadth of the land. Moreover. which it was to the immeasurable interest of the vanquished that they should lose,

FALL OF PORT ARTHUR

May End the War if the Czar Listens to the Best Classes of Russians.

MORE JAPANESE AT SEA

Army of 2,000 Sails for Unknown Point-Defeat of Cossacks-Kuropatkin and Alexieff.

LONDON, May 31, 3 a. m .- The latest news from the far East indicates that Japan is concentrating her strength with the view of reducing Port Arthur. All fighting in other portions of Liao-Tung peninsula and Manchuria is merely incidental to keeping the attention of Kuropatkin away from the real seat of war. In keeping Kuropatkin so busy he cannot go to the relief of Port Arthur, General Kurokt is worrying the main Russian army at several points, capturing a few guns and prisoners here and there and occasionally killing and wounding a number of the enemy. About 2,000 Cossacks were defeated at Air-Yong-Pien-Mem, while the Japanese army was moving on Kwan-Tien. Following the battle of Kin-Chou the Japanese captured fifty-six railway cars and a quantity

Another army division of 15,000 men has left Japan for an unknown destination, which may be either northeastern Korea or some point near Port Arthur.

The attack on Port Arthur, the Chronicle's Tokio correspondent telegraphs, is expected to begin about June 15. Correspondents will leave here June 10, in time to see the capture, probably about June 20. TERMS OF BANDIT CHIEF The correspondent also says that 10,000 Russians have been sent up the Liao river in junks to Tie-Ling.

The Morning Post's Shanghai correspondent wires that several Japanese transports are loading troops in northeast

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Telegraph says the general impression among the highest classes is that the fall of Port Arthur ought to denote the end of the war, and that if Japan succeeds in this aim Russia's best interest would be to make peace, but nobody, the correspondent avers, has the moral courage to make such a suggestion to the Emperor.

According to correspondents at Japanese headquarters up to May 29 nothing important had developed beyond outpost encounters. Japanese troops are largely engaged in building roads and bridges. The Standard's correspondent says that General Kuroki gave a luncheon to foreign military attaches to celebrate the victory on the Yalu, while almost simultaneously the Japanese first army was informed of the Kin-Chou victory. The same correspondent indicates the reason for delay in downpour has been very heavy. General Kuropatkin, the Telegraph's St. Petersburg correspondent says, is fighting two enemies, one at home, the other in Manchuria. While his military reputation is undergoing a terrible ordeal, he is also accused of failure as minister of war to make proper preparations for war. The Emperor is alleged to be so dissatisfied that he would dismiss both Alexieff and Kuropatkin were it not that he fears the effect on public opinion.

JAPANESE BENT ON TAKING THE FORTRESS

ST. PETERSBURG, May 30 .- According securing the release of Messrs. Ion Perdi-caris and Cromwell Varley from the Mo-Press from a high source, important news regarding the Japanese plan of campaign, which has reached the Russian authorities since the battle of Kin-Chou compels the for her to receive requests both from the conviction that the advance of General Kuroki and the activity of his scouts northwest and southwest of Feng-Wang-Cheng are part of a well-executed feint to prevent General Kuropatkin from detaching a strong force to hamper General Oku's operations on the Liao-Tung peninsula. Under cover of General Kuroki's screens, it is added part of the Japanese army landed at Taku-Shan will be moved southward into the peninsula, while Kuroki attempts to make Kuropatkin believe that he intends to force a decisive engagement with him. This information would tend to prove that the primary object of the Japanese campaign all along has been Port Arthur, and that once that fortress in in their hands, unless an exceedingly favorable opportunity offers to attack Kuropatkin, the Japanese plan is simply to make their tenure secure and force the Russian commander to assume the offensive.

Moreover, there is information to the effect that the Japanese propose to storm Port Arthur with the briefest possible delay, after having first closed the harbor to render the egress of the Russian ships impossible at the last moment, thus foreing the Russians to destroy them without subjecting the Japanese to the inevitable losses which must occur if the Russian squadron gets out for a last fight before going to the bottom. The previous repeated efforts of the Japanese to cork the harbor have been as much with the view to this ultimate situation as for protecting
